ABSTRACT

The present article would like to represent an essential guide for the analysis of a poetic text in order to point out some of the main instruments (such as: componential analysis, semantics of logic, stylistic analysis), meant to set up the relationship between denotation and connotation, the role of figures of speech in establishing imprecise linguistic acts and, at the same time, the role of rhetoric within the process of concealing / revealing literary meaning. Our study also intends to define the degree to which semantic imprecision, operating at a lexical level, can constitute the main support in identifying a general linguistic and semantic precision when we refer to a poetic text.

ABSTRACT

The acquisition of an onomastic function has underpinned the transfer to the area of toponymic research of many facts, happenings and characters that belong to our close or remote past. Of these, the hereby article deals with how the toponymy of Oltenia and Muntenia reflects certain social categories lying not at the border of the society, but rather outside it. Most of them refer to hoți [thieves] and haiduci outlaws], who at some point in time played a major role in the history of Romanian provinces.

oana.duta@yahoo.com

ABSTRACT

The hereby paper aims at corroborating the information provided by lexicographical sources for a range of Spanish idioms including the word boca and their Romanian equivalents, by means of a contextual analysis model. The semantic behaviour will be analysed based on contexts found on the internet, and our approach will deal both with convergences and divergences, so that a clear assessment may be performed and pertinent conclusions may be drawn. Moreover, aspects such as positive or negative connotation, language levels, the type of subject or object the idiom can refer to in the two languages, etc. will be observed.

THE DIALECTICAL ETYMOLOGY OF THE TERM “PRESENTATION” AS A FORM OF SPEAKING ACTIVITY
ABSTRACT

The dialectical etymology of interpretation of the concept “presentation” as a kind of speaking activity will be discussed in this article. The author highlighted its two interrelated but not identical components, which are information and persuasion. A methodological aspect of both parts of the presentation is considered, and the information properties and principles of persuasion are characterized. It was theoretically substantiated that information and persuasion are in a dialectical relationship and are independent components; their sum is presentation.

WHERE THE RIVER CONVERGES:
TOPONYMIC STRATIGRAPHY

ABSTRACT

The aim of this paper is the reconstruction of the remote naming process and toponymic stratigraphy of the place names Bistagno and Sessame, proposing two new etymological reconstructions for them, in order to recover the prehistoric origins of the two toponyms, taking into account previous interpretations and hypotheses. The aim of the paper is also to highlight possible paretymologies inherent in the two place names.
Bistagno and Sessame are two small neighboring villages of prehistoric origins located in Piedmont, North-Western Italy, at the border between the current Provinces of Alessandria and Asti. Since the origins of their names are still disputed, this paper sheds some light on their toponymic stratigraphies, investigating both of them in-depth.

ABSTRACT

This paper aims at underlining the various modes of discursive manifestation of epistemic probability in contemporary Spanish, where the dichotomy potential probability vs. potential possibility is updated through distinct forms, by means of the opposition between Future and Conditional – an opposition which materializes exclusively in relation to time reference. The first part of our study is dedicated to the analysis of the morpheme of Future Tense, whose particularity is the ability to operate within the same context either with the deictic and temporal prototypic value of [Future Tense] or with a modal value, in which case the time reference of the predication is simultaneous with the situation of communication. The second part of our study focuses on the discursive functioning of the -ría verbal form as an updating morpheme of “potential probability in the past”, both in inferential, suppository contexts, as well as in concessive structures.

Key words: future tense, conditional mood, epistemic modality

COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF MORPHOLOGICAL FEATURES OF MALE AND FEMALE CORPORA BASED ON AMERICAN DATING SHOW "THE BACHELOR US" CONTESTANTS' SPEECH
ABSTRACT

The article is devoted to the description and comparative analysis of morphological features of male and female corpora based on the speech of contestants in the American dating show “The Bachelor US”. The article includes a thorough scientific description of the classification of parts of speech. The most appropriate was considered to be Kaushanskaya’s classification, as it fully reveals all necessary data for the forthcoming corpus analysis. Statistical data help us draw conclusions about the morphological similarities and differences in real contemporary male and female discourse.

INTENŢIONALITATEA STRATEGICĂ A DISCURSULUI AUDIOVIZUAL

ABSTRACT

The re-profiling of audiovisual programmes in order to achieve a comfortable position on the media market has resulted in a re-configuration of the profile of their moderators/creators. A compared analysis of the frequency and variety of language errors made by professionals of electronic press along 15 years (2001-2016) shows a worrying process: vulgar, argotic language, grammar and vocabulary mistakes, orthoepic errors which a decade and a half ago used to be exceptions and caused hilariousness (not necessarily humour) are nowadays seen as correct. Their reiteration on various media channels, the multiplication of messages in the public space generated a new strategic intentionality that will be approached through the semio-discursive method of device analysis.

ABSTRACT

The translation of a novel by Ricardo Güiraldes or any other Argentine author involves a range of problems for translators accustomed to Spanish in Spain. While voseo verbal forms are easy to understand and are present in the Royal Academy dictionary, one can still find words and phrases with unexpected meanings. The novel “Raucho” was written in 1917, but, however, the vocabulary of the novel continues to remain obscure in many aspects. The difficulty resides in the author’s use of folk speech.

We propose an analysis of linguistic stereotypes in football language, as it appears in sports commentaries of the written press. Starting from a corpus including 50 sports commentaries of the First French League, the 2014-2015 season, published in the newspaper L'Equipe, we shall analyse the various types of linguistic stereotypes, to reach the conclusion that stereotypical expressions do not overload language, but, on the contrary, they are a means of reinforcing expressiveness and of creating a specific way of expression that only enhances the cohesion of the discursive community.

ABSTRACT

This study investigates one of the most comic scenes in the history of Romanian drama: the reading and interpretation by two comic characters of the article titled “The Republic and the Reaction or the Future and the Past” (in the comedy “A Stormy Night” by I. L. Caragiale).

The main conceptual tools used belong to Jean Michel Adam’s “organon”: “ways of instigating to action” and “persuasion”. A faulty interpretation is followed in a comic manner by a persuasion-self-persuasion in the sense suggested by the discourse concerned with the instigation to action. This is argumented by:

a) the identification of the receivers’ casual tendency to sympathize with the emitter (which brings about a reception in the register of feelings, emotions and not in the rational one; more precisely, we are dealing with a self-persuasive reception).

b) the defective and at the same time comic decoding of the message, which is due to the inaccurate comprehension of the key lexemes of the text: the French word manquer (‘to miss, to turn aside from’) is understood as ‘eat’ (because of its phonemic similarity to the Romanian a mânca ‘to eat’), while the term suffrage is not interpreted as ‘vote’, but as ‘dining room’ (phonemic similarity to the Romanian term for ‘dining room’, i.e. sufragerie).
Key words: ways of instigating to action, persuasion, inaccurate interpretation

PHONETIC CLUES IN CHINESE FOLKLORE LITERATURE: A STUDY ON THE PHONEMIC FEATURES OF LIANHUALAO OPERA WANGPO MAJI

ABSTRACT

The present study aims at analyzing the phonemic features reflected by the text of the Lianhualao opera Wangpo Maji from an inner reconstruction perspective. This work is currently preserved at the Waseda University Library. It is a rare and valuable text for the studies on history and development of folklore operas. However, we have no specific information on where and when the manuscript has been copied. Therefore, the philological analysis of the phonemic features of this text may represent the starting point of further studies on the origins of this unique literary source.

The analysis of the erotic discourse in the work of early Romanian authors Nicolae Filimon and Ioan Slavici is relevant for the investigation of subjectivity construction models, as well as some poietic, narrative construction models. The author’s self-interpolation into the discourse, either in addition to the characters or among them, with the purpose of expressing his/her own theses or theories, is an indicator of mentality with respect to eroticism.

ABSTRACT

Hedging represents an absence of certainty, being used by writers to describe any linguistic item or strategy that can tone down statements, comments and opinions. This paper examines the importance of hedging in scientific discourse. The paper is structured in three parts: in the first part we discuss the development of the concepts of ‘hedge’ and ‘hedging’, presenting their widening since the 70’s when they were discussed in the context of pragmatic analysis; in the second part we discuss the concepts that are related to hedging, namely epistemic modality, evidentiality and vagueness; in the third part we make a description of the characteristics of scientific texts, followed by an analysis of the typology of hedging constructions, namely the different devices (‘strategic stereotypes’) that carry out the hedging in academic writing, such as lexical verbs, modal verbs, modal nouns, epistemic adverbs and adjectives, hypothetical constructions.

ABSTRACT

The article analyses some aspects of coding and inferring implicitness in drama texts. Implicitness is characterized by features which define its nature and means in this genre. The hereby article aims at presenting the potential of main structural elements (cue and stage direction) in implicitness realization. We attempt at presenting underlying mechanisms of forming implicitness by emotive-evaluative semantics of drama compositional components.

DIFICULTĂŢI DE ÎNVĂŢARE A UNOR TERMENI DE RUDEANIE DIN LIMBA ROMÂNĂ DIN PERSPECTIVA VORBITORILOR ARABI

Alina-Georgiana FOCSINEANU

geofocsineanu@gmail.com

ABSTRACT
The present paper deals with language acquisition, and focuses on the learning of some Romanian kinship terms by Arabic speakers who studied in Romania. After having had long talks with Arabic students, the author found out some possible causes that make learning of some Romanian kinship terms seem difficult for Arabic speakers. As Romanian does not distinguish between relatives on mother’s side and relatives on father’s side, it is a bit strange for Arabic speakers to use only one Romanian kinship term to designate their maternal and paternal relatives simultaneously. However, the author noticed that the communicative method is one of the best methods for a proper learning of some Romanian kinship terms.

ETUDE COMPARATIVE DES EVOLUTIONS SEMANTIQUES ET PRAGMATIQUES DES ADVERBES BIEN EN FRANÇAIS ET BINE EN ROUMAIN

Alice IONESCU
Universitatea din Craiova
alice.ionescu@yahoo.com

ABSTRACT

This paper examines the similarities and differences between the meanings and uses of the French adverb bien and the Romanian adverb bine, in terms of their modal, enunciative and pragmatic functions. Although they have the same Latin origin and they share many meanings as adverbs of manner, bien and bine have acquired different values at a pragmatic level along the time. The corpus of our analysis includes examples given in French language dictionaries and, for the Romanian adverb bine, in a range of excerpts from contemporary novels.

THE INTERPLAY OF VISUAL IMAGES IN FOOD ADVERTISING

ABSTRACT

This paper examines food advertising as a complex multi-modal ensemble that includes linguistic and graphic, as well as audio-visual elements. The aim of the paper is to review the interaction between the type of communication that is pragmatically determined, the marketing intentions to sale the advertised food and the environment for delivering the message via broadcasting. Unlike most of the discussions on the role of food advertising, the present report explores and demonstrates pragmatic value of the specific commercial in which the verbal cues are supported by pictures and images. The configuration text – picture is further analyzed as a type of relationship, concerning the extra-linguistic reality as a favourable medium and condition for executing the goal of the commercial.

The study Ţiganiada, a Language “poematicon”, is an applied literary analysis. The paper aims at highlighting the evolution of literary Romanian language during 1700-1820. The used text is paradigmatic for the limit of 1800. Being published posthumously about half a century after the author’s death, the work of Budai-Deleanu does not influence the direction of development of Romanian literature, but it is important for the innovative sense of language. The meta-analytic method and the direct observation method are used for this study.

ABSTRACT

The article analyzes arbëresh dialects, which have undergone variation along the centuries, resulting in the uniqueness of terms that sometimes change between one another from one arbëresh settlement to another. The direct and continuous contacts with other dialects significantly influence the various regional dialects and Italian language. This is why arbëresh is fully recognized by the Italian state as a language of an ethno-linguistic minority in local administration and compulsory education.

ABSTRACT

The article is devoted to the problem of the development of skills connected with the acquisition of foreign lexis on the basis of semantic fields. This becomes possible due to the unification of lexical units that are well-known and unknown to the students, into systemized semantic groups – semantic fields. Semantic fields can be useful for the quantitative and qualitative enrichment of the vocabulary; they serve to choose a lexical unit correctly, to collocate lexical units according to existing norms, to use the lexis of various semantic fields in different contexts without mistakes, to guarantee conscious, automatic language skills of the students, to increase the active vocabulary of students.
